

The Energy Services Partnership

ESP becomes Limited in status but not in its product range...take a look at our new website to find out more!

Energy Services Partnership has started the New Year with a new direction, re-branding the Firm, incorporating as a Limited company and launching a new website to demonstrate the full range of services that ESP Limited now provides.

Managing Director, Derek Dixon, says

“ since founding ESP in 2002 our service range and capability has increased exponentially with the development of systems, the recruitment of experienced professionals and the creation of partnerships with a select group of specialist practitioners. As a consequence, we have grown in size and sophistication and recognised we have done very little to tell people what we can do for them. The launch of the new website will hopefully change all that and we are very excited about the services we now provide and the people who have joined us to help serve our existing and new clients with equal vigour and dedication. ”

The new website, which was launched earlier this week, details the full range of services that ESP provides, and is a useful tool in helping organisations decide on how best ESP can create value for money solutions to their energy related problems.

Whether you need advice on Energy Risk Management, Procurement, New Utility Connections or increasingly important Environmental Services, there is information about these topics and more online at www.energyservicespartnership.co.uk. Here you can also find contact information so you can speak to one of our team of professionals who are here to help you and your company better understand how to deal with your energy needs.

Our new website also now has a 'News' section, which will be regularly updated to include information on industry related developments and discussions on hot topics that could impact your business.

Even existing clients of ESP, may find that the new website has details about recently introduced services could help you further enhance your company's bottom line. Further developments are planned during 2009, which include a Client log-in section to allow ESP clients to securely view their company's portfolio and contract(s) status, check validated bills and download energy consumption data.

In addition, to keep Clients regularly updated on what is happening in the energy markets and current issues which are affecting wholesale energy prices, they will be able to sign-up for our 'Daily Market Update' which will be posted on the website every day.
